01 ABOUT THE HACKATHON

RADIX Talent Match Hackathon

Student teams build RADIX Talent Match — a small, real, end-to-end tool that helps a candidate understand how ready they actually are for a specific job. It is built on RADIX's 12-skillset competency framework and real hiring data.

Earlier RADIX work built the company's side of a placement platform: a 163-parameter research framework, a 12-skillset competency dictionary, and real hiring-round data for real companies. This hackathon flips the lens — the same skill-set data, built for the candidate trying to figure out if they're actually ready.

FIVE MODULES, ONE INTEGRATED TOOL

JD Analytics	Resume Parsing	Profile Builder	Talent Check	Skill Matching
Extracts the skills a job description actually requires.	Extracts the skills and technical signal a resume shows.	A full candidate profile — beyond the resume.	Readiness against a company's bar across all 12 skillsets.	Match score and gap list for one specific job posting.

TEAMS	Teams of five. Each member owns one module; one member also serves as Scrum Master.
BUILD WINDOW	Students received the hackathon on 24 October at 9:30 AM and close their submissions by 28 October.
TEST DATA	Six real job descriptions from Google, Microsoft and Oracle Financial Services Software, and four sample candidate resumes with deliberately different skill profiles.
TECH STACK	Python, LangChain / LLM agents, React and Supabase.
END-TO-END FLOW	Pick a JD → parse a resume → build / update a profile → run Talent Check → run Skill Matching.
